Antique Kristi SnowCatVehicle Description

This was built around 1961 In Colorado. It has a hydraulic suspension and is able to traverse sidehills while staying level. The engine is a 1600cc that was adapted in replacing the old VW 40 hp. It was rebuilt and running great and everything worked but it has sat for about 10 years. The engine is either seized or the trans has water in it and it is frozen (I have two more transmissions). I also have parts from two more of these that have been parted out. You can read all about them at kristisnowcatdotcom. There are photos of it on the site, KT2A Serial #00085. It is missing the dash, should be easy to replace because it is a flat fiberglass piece with SW gauges and the luggage rack is gone too. A guy bought it ten years ago and wanted me to send him some stuff off it. He never finished paying and it has sat since. The interior looks good too but is very old now. I am putting in a picture of a rebuilt one that has the suspension pumped up. You do that with the knobs inside. This one should be an easy fix mechanically but still needs cosmetics. It will drive on just about anything and go anywhere.

Feb 10

A: The dash was sent to a guy who was supposed to buy it. He wanted to put it in another one. The picture is so you can see what it looks like. The tracks are cracked but still work. They are conveyer belt with wood cleats and... Continue reading
